Arrests and Adjudication Relief
Kentucky allows trafficking survivors to clear their criminal record of arrests, adjudications, non-prosecuted cases, and convictions.

Official Documentation
Official documentation from any state or government agency, or documentation that falls within another set of specific categories creates a presumption that the survivor is eligible for criminal record relief in Kentucky. Official documentation should never be required for criminal record relief; however, if a survivor can provide official documentation, the presumption should prevent them from having to share their experience repeatedly in different settings which can be emotionally difficult and cause additional trauma.

Time Limits and Wait Times
Kentucky requires a survivor to wait 60 days following the date the final judgment was entered by the court to apply for criminal record relief. Ideally, survivors would be able to choose the time that is right for them to apply for relief instead of having to wait because of arbitrary time frames imposed on them by the state.

Hearing Requirement
A hearing is always required in Kentucky and survivors must appear in person at all proceedings. This can be costly and also dangerous for survivors. Ideally, hearings would not be required, but if they are, survivors should be allowed to appear through alternate methods like telephone, video, or waive their right to appear at all.

Scoring System:

Guidelines: Grades and rankings are determined by comparing elements of existing criminal record relief statutes against an ideal statute, as defined by Polaris and the Survivor Reentry Project. Laws are scored out of a maximum 100 points. This project looks solely at criminal record relief statutes specifically intended for victims of human trafficking arrested or prosecuted as adults. Accordingly, states that only offer relief to survivors with arrests from when they were juveniles do not earn credit in this report. These states scored a "0." Additionally, the research team prioritized the inclusion of specific and clear language within each criminal record relief statute, rather than having to rely on, locate, or incorporate other state law sanctions. This means a state that, for example, has strong confidentiality language in another section of law, but does not mention confidentiality protections in the trafficking-specific statute will not get points for confidentiality in this analysis. States with zeros - that is, states with no law for adult trafficking survivors in place - did not receive letter grades.
